EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

-----oo0oo-----

AREZOU MANSOURIAN; LAUREN
MANCUSO; NANCY NIEN-LI CHIANG;
and CHRISTINE WING-SI NG; and all those similarly situated,

NO. CIV. 2-03-02591-FCD-EFB

Plaintiffs,

v.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

BOARD OF REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA at DAVIS; LAWRENCE "LARRY"
VANDERHOEF; GREG WARZECKA; PAM GILL-FISHER; ROBERT FRANKS; and LAWRENCE SWANSON,

Defendants.

-----oo0oo-----

This matter is before the court on defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c) filed on June 5, 2007. Plaintiffs oppose defendants' motion. The court heard oral argument on the motion on July 27, 2007 and allowed the parties to submit supplemental briefing addressing new arguments raised at the hearing. Based upon the submissions of the parties and the arguments made by counsel, and for the reasons set forth below, defendants' motion

1 for judgment on the pleadings is GRANTED in part and DENIED in 2 part.

3 BACKGROUND<sup>1</sup>

4 Plaintiffs Arezou Mansourian ("Mansourian"), Lauren Mancuso
5 ("Mancuso"), and Christine Wing-Si Ng ("Ng") (collectively 6 "plaintiffs")<sup>2</sup> are former female wrestlers at the University of 7 California, Davis ("UCD"). (Pls.' Compl. [Docket #1] 8 ("Compl."), filed Dec. 18, 2003, at 5-7.) Plaintiffs filed this 9 action on behalf of themselves and a putative class on December 10 18, 2003. Plaintiffs named as defendants in their individual and 11 official capacities the following parties: the Regents of the 12 University of California ("UCD"); the Chancellor of the 13 University, Larry Vanderhoef; the Athletic Director at the 14 University, Greg Warzecka; Associate Athletic Directors of the 15 University, Pam Gill-Fisher and Lawrence Swanson; and former 16 Associate Vice Chancellor, Student Affairs, Robert Franks
17 (collectively, the "individual defendants"). (Compl. at 2.)

18 In the 1990s, varsity wrestling at UCD included both women 19 and men. (Id. at ¶ 82.) Female wrestlers at UCD received high 20 quality coaching, wrestled under women's freestyle rules rather 21 than men's collegiate rules, and received the various benefits of 22 varsity status. (Id. at ¶¶ 82, 85.) Some of UCD's female 23 wrestlers went on to national and international acclaim after 24 having trained at and received the benefits of wrestling at UCD.

25
26 <sup>1</sup> The following facts are primarily derived from plaintiffs' complaint filed December 18, 2003.

27 <sup>2</sup> Plaintiff Nancy Nien-Li Chiang ("Chiang") voluntarily
28 dismissed all claims in this action on June 12, 2007. (Mem. & Order [Docket #195], filed July 12, 2007).

1 (Id. at ¶¶ 85-87.)

2 Plaintiffs participated in high school wrestling and chose 3 to attend UCD because it offered them the opportunity to 4 participate in wrestling while in college. (Compl., ¶¶ 9-11, 24-5 51.) Mansourian and Ng filled out the NCAA and UCD paperwork 6 necessary for intercollegiate athletics, completed the weight 7 certification requirements for intercollegiate wrestling, and 8 participated in UCD's wrestling program for about 2 years. (Id.
9 at ¶¶ 27-30, 46-50, 55-59.) As varsity wrestlers, plaintiffs 10 received benefits such as medical and athletic training services, 11 laundry services, academic tutoring services, strength and 12 conditioning coaching, wrestling coaching, insurance, access to 13 the weight room, and access to varsity facilities. (Id. at ¶¶ 14 33, 51, 58.) Mancuso was recruited to wrestle for UCD and 15 awarded an athletic scholarship. (Id. ¶ 39.) She enrolled, 16 filled out the necessary paperwork, and received the required 17 certifications to participate in intercollegiate wrestling. (Id.
18 at ¶¶ 40-42.) Shortly thereafter, however, defendants eliminated 19 women from UCD's wrestling program, and Mancuso was denied her 20 scholarship. (Id. at ¶¶ 59-60.)

21 During the 2000-2001 academic year, defendants eliminated 22 wrestling athletic participation opportunities for female, but 23 not male, students (the "No Females Directive"). (Id. at ¶¶ 60-24 62.) Plaintiffs and then-wrestling coach Michael Burch protested 25 this decision. Plaintiffs met with and/or complained to 26 defendants, asserting that the No Females Directive constituted 27 illegal sex discrimination. Defendants ignored the complaints.
28 (Id. at ¶¶ 63-69.) Plaintiffs filed a complaint with the Office

1 for Civil Rights of the United States Department of Education
2 ("OCR") in the Spring of 2001. (Id. at ¶ 67.) Defendants later 3 agreed to rescind the No Females Directive and to allow women to 4 participate in wrestling. (Id. at ¶ 70-74.)

5 Plaintiffs, including newcomer Mancuso, enrolled at UCD for 6 the 2001-2002 academic year in reliance upon defendants' promised 7 reinstatement of female wrestling participation opportunities.
8 They filled out their NCAA and UCD eligibility paperwork, 9 completed the weight certification requirements for varsity
10 wrestling, and were deemed eligible. (Id. at ¶ 75.)

11 Unfortunately, plaintiffs returned to a wrestling team with a new 12 coach who did not support women wrestlers and failed to coach
13 them or treat them like the male wrestlers. (Id. at ¶¶ 75-76.)
14 Defendants informed plaintiffs that to participate in wrestling 15 they would have to be part of a mixed gender team and would have 16 to beat the men at their weight class under men's collegiate-17 style rules, even though the women had previously only 18 participated as part of a women's wrestling program (not a mixed 19 gender team) using international freestyle wrestling rules. (Id.
20 at ¶ 77.) Plaintiffs again complained, but defendants refused 21 and continue to refuse to remedy the situation and to provide 22 women's wrestling opportunities. (Id. at ¶¶ 75-79.) As a 23 result, to date, no women are allowed to participate in UCD
24 wrestling. (Id.)

25 As a result of defendants' actions, plaintiffs could not 26 attend wrestling practice, could not use the wrestling facilities 27 or weight room, lost their laundry benefits, lost their insurance 28 they received as wrestling athletes, were banned from receiving

1 instruction from the UCD coaching staff, and were denied athletic 2 training and other medical benefits they received as UCD 3 wrestlers. (Id. at ¶ 61.) Plaintiffs also lost the academic 4 credit associated with UCD wrestling athletes, and were denied 5 early class registration. (Id. at ¶ 62.)

6 Subsequently, plaintiffs brought this action and alleged six 7 claims for relief: (1) violation of Title IX for failure to 8 provide equal athletic opportunities for women; (2) violation of 9 Title IX for failure to provide equal athletic financial 10 assistance to women; (3) retaliation in violation of Title IX;
11 (4) violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on the Equal Protection 12 clause of the U.S. Constitution; (5) violation of the California 13 Unruh Civil Rights Act; (6) violation of public policy based upon 14 violations of the California Constitution and the California 15 Education Code. (Id. at 35-53). Defendants filed a motion to 16 dismiss pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) on 17 March 5, 2004. (Defs.' Mot. to Dismiss [Docket #13-15], filed 18 March 5, 2004.) The court denied the motion on May 6, 2004.
19 (Mem. & Order [Docket #25], filed May 6, 2007.)

20 Unfortunately, throughout the course of this litigation, 21 both defendants' and plaintiffs' counsel have suffered illnesses.
22 In October 2005, both parties stipulated to an extension of 23 deadlines due to defendants' lead counsel's illness, which made 24 her unavailable to travel to depositions over the following two 25 months. (Stipulation [Docket #57], filed Oct. 28, 2005.) On 26 April 14, 2006, one week before plaintiffs' motion for class 27 certification was to be heard by the court, plaintiffs' counsel 28 filed an ex parte motion to stay and extend scheduling based upon

1 plaintiffs' counsel's serious health issues. (Ex Parte Mot. to 2 Stay [Docket #117], filed Apr. 14, 2006.) The court granted
3 plaintiffs' motion, and thereafter, on June 6, 2006, the parties 4 stipulated to extend the stay and related scheduling matters.
5 (Order [Docket #125], filed Apr. 18, 2006; Stipulation to Extend 6 Stay and Related Scheduling Matters [Docket #130], filed June 6, 7 2006.) On July 21, 2006, plaintiffs moved to extend the stay in 8 order to find new counsel because of plaintiffs' counsel's 9 serious medical condition, which the court granted. (Motion to 10 Extend [Docket #134], filed July 21, 2006; Order [Docket #137], 11 filed July 24, 2006.) On August 18, 2006, Monique Oliver filed a 12 notice of appearance on behalf of plaintiffs. (Docket #140, 13 filed Aug. 18, 2006.) On August 23, 2006, and October 19, 2006, 14 the parties stipulated to extend the stay based upon the 15 appearance of new counsel in this matter. (Docket #141, 147.)

16 On February 2, 2007, plaintiffs filed a motion to amend the 17 complaint to add new plaintiffs, who would also be class 18 representatives, and related allegations. (Pls.' Mot. to Amend 19 [Docket #158], filed Feb. 2, 2007.) The court denied plaintiffs'
20 motion. (Mem. & Order [Docket #175], filed Mar. 20, 2007.) 21 Subsequently, by stipulation of both parties, the class claims in 22 this action were dismissed on June 12, 2007. (Mem. & Order 23 [Docket #195], filed June 12, 2007.) Defendants filed the 24 instant motion on June 5, 2007. (Docket #188.) At oral 25 argument, plaintiffs' counsel conceded that plaintiffs no longer 26 seek injunctive relief. However, plaintiffs do claim that they 27 are entitled to monetary and punitive damages for defendants' 28 denial of educational benefits, lost scholarship money, and the

1 humiliation, emotional distress, and related harm caused by 2 defendants' sex discrimination. (Id. at 55-56.)

3 STANDARD

4 Rule 12(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides, 5 in relevant part, that "[a]fter the pleadings are closed but 6 within such time as not to delay the trial, any party may move 7 for judgment on the pleadings." Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 12(c).

8 Moreover, Rule 12(h)(2) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 9 provides in relevant part that a defense of failure to state a 10 claim upon which relief can be granted, may be made by motion for 11 judgment on the pleadings. Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 12(h).

12 When considering a motion for judgment on the pleadings 13 presenting a defense of failure to state a claim upon which 14 relief can be granted, a court should employ those standards 15 normally applicable to a motion to dismiss for failure to state a 16 claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6)
17 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See Enron Oil Trading & 18 Transp. Co. v. Walbrook Ins. Co., Ltd., 132 F.3d 526, 528-29 (9th 19 Cir. 1997); 5B Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, 20 Civil § 1368 at 515-16 (3d ed. 2007). On a motion to dismiss, 21 the allegations of the complaint must be accepted as true. Cruz 22 v. Beto, 405 U.S. 319, 322 (1972). The court is bound to give 23 plaintiff the benefit of every reasonable inference to be drawn 24 from the "well-pleaded" allegations of the complaint. Retail 25 Clerks Int'l Ass'n v. Schermerhorn, 373 U.S. 746, 753 n.6 (1963).
26 Thus, the plaintiff need not necessarily plead a particular fact 27 if that fact is a reasonable inference from facts properly 28 alleged. See id.

1        Nevertheless, it is inappropriate to assume that the 2 plaintiff "can prove facts which it has not alleged or that the 3 defendants have violated the . . . laws in ways that have not 4 been alleged." Associated Gen. Contractors of Calif., Inc. v.
5 Calif. State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 526 (1983).
6 Moreover, the court "need not assume the truth of legal 7 conclusions cast in the form of factual allegations." United 8 States ex rel. Chunie v. Ringrose, 788 F.2d 638, 643 n.2 (9th 9 Cir. 1986).

10        Ultimately, the court may not dismiss a complaint in which 11 the plaintiff has alleged "enough facts to state a claim to 12 relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atlantic Corp. v.
13 Twombly, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 1974 (2007). Only where a plaintiff has 14 not "nudged [his or her] claims across the line from conceivable 15 to plausible," is the complaint properly dismissed. Id. "[A] 16 court may dismiss a complaint only if it is clear that no relief 17 could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved 18 consistent with the allegations." Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A., 19 534 U.S. 506, 514 (2002) (quoting Hudson v. King & Spalding, 467 20 U.S. 69, 73 (1984)).

21        In ruling upon a motion to dismiss, the court may consider 22 only the complaint, any exhibits thereto, and matters which may 23 be judicially noticed pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 201.
24 See Mir v. Little Co. Of Mary Hospital, 844 F.2d 646, 649 (9th 25 Cir. 1988); Isuzu Motors Ltd. v. Consumers Union of United 26 States, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1035, 1042 (C.D. Cal. 1998).

ANALYSIS*I. Title IX

Alleged violations of Title IX in the area of athletics are typically divided into claims of either equal treatment or effective accommodation. Pederson v. Louisiana State Univ., 213 F.3d 858, 865 n.4 (5th Cir. 2000). This division arises from regulations promulgated by Title IX. Id. Claims under an equal treatment theory "derive from the Title IX regulations found at 34 C.F.R. §§ 106.37(c) 106.41(c)(2)-(10), which call for equal provision of [] athletic benefits and opportunities among the sexes." Boucher v. Syracuse Univ., 164 F.3d 113, 115 n.2 (2d Cir. 1999). Claims brought under an effective accommodation theory stem from the implementing regulations that provide:

in determining whether equal athletic opportunities for members of both sexes are available, the Office of Civil Rights of the Department of Education (the office charged with enforcement of Title IX) will consider, among other factors, "[w]hether the selection of sports and levels of competition effectively accommodate the interests and abilities of members of both sexes."

Pederson, 213 F.3d at 865 n.4 (citing Boucher, 164 F.3d at 115 n.1; 34 C.F.R. § 106.41(c)(1)).

As clarified by both arguments made at hearing and the supplemental submissions of the parties, plaintiffs are asserting claims against defendant UCD under both an unequal treatment theory and an ineffective accommodation theory. Defendant UCD moves for judgment on the pleadings as to both theories.

A. Unequal Treatment Claims

Pursuant to an "unequal treatment" theory, plaintiffs seek damages arising out of the No Females Directive issued in the fall of 2000; an alleged broken promise in June 2001 to reinstate

1 the female wrestling program at UCD; the failure to renew the 2 contract of their wrestling coach; and requiring females to 3 compete for membership on the UCD wrestling team under the same 4 terms and conditions as male athletes in the fall of 2001.
5 Plaintiffs contend that these were discriminatory acts made by 6 defendant pursuant to a "policy and practice" of discrimination, 7 and as such, these allegations establish a "continuing violation"
8 of federal law. (Pl.'s Opp'n, filed July 13, 2007, at 5.)
9 Conversely, defendant asserts that plaintiffs merely allege a 10 series of discrete acts. (Def.'s Reply to Pl.'s Opp'n ("Reply"), 11 filed July 20, 2007, at 4-6.) According to defendant UCD, the 12 last discrete act occurred on October 16, 2001 with the 13 resolution of plaintiffs' OCR complaint, and thus, plaintiffs' 14 claims tolled in October 2002. Id. at 5.

15 1. Discrete Acts

16 "A discrete retaliatory or discriminatory act 'occurred' on 17 the day that it happened." National R.R. Passenger Corp. v.
18 Morgan, 536 U.S. 101, 110 (2002). Where a discrete act is the 19 basis for a discrimination claim, the timely filing period begins 20 to run from that date. Id. Such acts "are not actionable if 21 time barred, even when they are related to acts alleged in timely 22 filed charges." Id. at 113.

23 In Morgan, the Supreme Court found that, with regard to the 24 applicability of the continuing violation doctrine, the term 25 "practice" does not convert related discrete acts into a single 26 unlawful practice for the purposes of timely filing. 536 U.S.
27 101, 111 (2002). The Court defined a "discrete act" of 28 discrimination as one that constitutes a separate, actionable

1 unlawful employment practice that is temporally distinct. Id. at 2 114. In the employment context, the Court pointed to 3 "termination, failure to promote, denial of transfer, [and] 4 refusal to hire" as examples of such discrete acts. Id. The 5 Court held that the cause of action accrued when the discrete, 6 unlawful action occurred, and that "a new violation does not 7 occur, and a new charging period does not commence, upon the 8 occurrence of subsequent nondiscriminatory acts that entail 9 adverse effects resulting from the past discrimination." See 10 Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., 127 S. Ct. 2162, 11 2169 (2007) (discussing the Court's holding in Morgan and other 12 related cases).

13 Subsequently, the Supreme Court has reiterated that the 14 current effects of discriminatory conduct "cannot breathe life 15 into [that] prior, uncharged conduct." Id. In Ledbetter, a 16 female retiree sued her former employer under Title VII and the 17 Equal Pay Act for alleged sex discrimination reflected in 18 negative evaluations, which resulted in her receiving lower 19 paychecks than her male counterparts. Id. at 2163-64. The 20 plaintiff argued that each of the paychecks she received 21 constituted a new, actionable discriminatory act. Id. at 2169.
22 The Court rejected this argument, holding that the actionable 23 discrete conduct occurred when the pay decision was made, not 24 when a paycheck was issued pursuant to that allegedly 25 discriminatory decision. Id. at 2175-76.

26 In this case, the heart of plaintiffs' Title IX claims based 27 upon an unequal treatment theory stems from discrete acts taken 28 against three women wrestlers over roughly a year's time.

1 Plaintiffs claim that defendant UCD first blatantly excluded them
2 from the wrestling program and then failed to give them a fair 3 opportunity to obtain a position on the team by requiring them to 4 compete against men, using men's rules. These claims are akin to 5 a claim of termination and failure to hire or promote in the 6 employment context. As such, they are appropriately 7 characterized as discrete acts. Plaintiffs further claim that 8 the discriminatory acts continued because they were unable to 9 wrestle each and every day that they were students at UCD.
10 However, this inability was merely the effect of defendant's 11 prior, allegedly discriminatory conduct. As set forth in 12 Ledbetter, the current effects of discriminatory conduct "cannot 13 breathe life into [that] prior, uncharged conduct." 127 S. Ct.
14 at 2169.

15 The rationale applied by the Ninth Circuit in Cherosky v.
16 Henderson is similarly applicable to this case. 330 F.3d 1243
17 (9th Cir. 2003). In Cherosky, current and former employees 18 brought suit against the United States Postal Service under the 19 Americans with Disabilities Act, challenging the denial of their 20 requests to wear respirators while on duty. Id. at 1244-45. The 21 Ninth Circuit found that the heart of the plaintiffs' complaint 22 stemmed from the individualized decisions to deny the plaintiffs' 23 requests and, as such, were discrete acts. Id. at 1247.
24 Similarly, in this case, the gravamen of plaintiffs' complaint 25 stems from individualized decisions by defendant regarding the 26 UCD wrestling program, which affected each individual plaintiff.
27 As such, these decisions are discrete acts.

28 /////

1 Plaintiffs contend that the reasoning of Morgan, Ledbetter, 2 and Cherosky does not apply in this case because each of those 3 cases arose out of an employment relationship between the 4 plaintiffs and the defendants. (Pls.' Supp. Mem., filed Aug. 10, 5 2007, at 7-9.) The crux of plaintiffs' argument is that because 6 Title VII claims arise in the employment context, the Supreme 7 Court's holdings in Morgan and Ledbetter should not control the 8 analysis of plaintiffs' Title IX unequal treatment claims.<sup>3</sup>

9 Plaintiffs' argument is unpersuasive. Title VII and Title 10 IX are sufficiently analogous that the "discrete discriminatory 11 acts" analysis prescribed in Morgan applies to the unequal 12 treatment claims brought by plaintiffs in this case. Both Title
13 VII and Title IX address sex discrimination, and the legislature 14 has emphasized the close relationship between the two.
15 Specifically, the House Report on Title IX explicitly referenced 16 the relationship between Title VII and Title IX:

17 Title VII . . . specifically excludes educational 18 institutions from its terms. [Title IX] would remove 19 that exemption and bring those in education under the 20 equal employment provision.

21 Education Amendments Act of 1972, Pub. L. No. 92-318, 1972

23 /////

---

24 <sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs, citing Gebser v. Lago Vista Indep. School 25 Dist., assert that under Title IX, courts "have a measure of 26 latitude to shape a sensible remedial scheme that best comports 27 with the statute." 524 U.S. 274, 284 (1998). This motion does 28 not raise issues regarding remedies, and thus, plaintiffs' reliance on Gebser in this context is misplaced. While Gebser demonstrates the "manifest" difference between Title VII and Title IX in terms of available remedies, the Court's analysis in Gebser did not address the analytical framework for assessing a Title IX claim on the merits. Id.

1 U.S.C.C.A.N. (86 Stat. 253) 2462, 2512.<sup>4</sup> The purposes that 2 Titles VII and Title IX are both intended to serve, eliminating 3 discrimination and providing protection against it, suggest that 4 Title VII's analytical framework with respect to discrete acts 5 should be applied to a Title IX claim for sex discrimination.
 6 See Mabry v. State Bd. of Community Colleges & Occupational 7 Educ., 813 F.2d 311, 316 n. 6 (10th Cir. 1987) ("Because Title
 8 VII prohibits the identical conduct prohibited by Title IX, i.e., 9 sex discrimination, we regard it as the most appropriate analogue 10 when defining Title IX's substantive standards . . . ."), cert.
 11 denied, 484 U.S. 849 (1987); see also Patricia H. v. Berkeley
 12 Unified School Dist., 830 F. Supp. 1288, 1293 (N.D. Cal. 1993)
 13 ("As the Supreme Court acknowledged in [Franklin], a student 14 should have the same protection in school that an employee has in 15 the workplace.").

16 Further, the Ninth Circuit's decision in Cherosky reinforces 17 the conclusion that the Morgan Court's significant restriction of 18 the continuing violations doctrine applies outside the Title VII
 19 context.<sup>5</sup> 330 F.3d at 1246. "Although Morgan involved Title VII 20 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Supreme Court's analysis of 21 the continuing violations doctrine is not limited to Title VII
 22 actions. It applies with equal force to the Rehabilitation Act 23 and to actions arising under other civil rights laws." Id.

---

 25 <sup>4</sup> On the day Title IX was enacted, Senator Bayh stated, 26 "this amendment [applies] Title VII's widely recognized standards of equality of employment opportunity to educational institutions." 118 Cong. Rec. 5807 (1972).

27 <sup>5</sup> In restricting the continuing violations doctrine, the 28 Court applied the "discrete discriminatory acts" analysis.
Morgan, 536 U.S. at 122.

(emphasis added); see e.g., RK Ventures, Inc. v. City of Seattle, 307 F.3d 1045 (9th Cir. 2002) (applying Morgan's rationale in an action brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983); Kaster v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am., 212 F. Supp. 1264 (D. Kan. 2002) (applying Morgan's rationale to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act).

Therefore, plaintiffs' claims under the unequal treatment theory arise out of a series of discrete acts and do not arise out of a continuing violation of federal law.

2. Pattern and Practice

Alternatively, plaintiffs argue that the Court's holding in Morgan does not apply to their case because they are alleging a pattern or practice theory of the type explicitly excluded from the Court's analysis and opinion in Morgan. 536 U.S. at 115 n.9. Defendant contends that, while evidence of such a claim can support an individual's claim of discrimination, the pattern or practice method of proof cannot apply to a private, non-class cause of action. Whether individual plaintiffs can rely on a pattern or practice method of proof is an issue that has not been addressed by the Ninth Circuit.

"A pattern or practice case is not a separate and free-standing cause of action, . . . but is really 'merely another method by which disparate treatment can be shown.'" Celestine v. Petroleos de Venezuela SA, 266 F.3d 343, 355 (5th Cir. 2001) (citing Mooney v. Aramco Servs. Co., 54 F.3d 1207, 1219 (5th Cir. 1995)). Specifically, a pattern or practice theory of discrimination carries with it a different method of proof than an individual claim of discrimination. See Int'l Brotherhood of Teamsters v. United States, 431 U.S. 324, 334-40; Lowery v.

1 Circuit City Stores, Inc., 158 F.3d 742, 759 (1998) (overruled on 2 other grounds). In these cases, typically, the government
3 (either through the EEOC or the Attorney General) or a plaintiff
4 class charges systematic discrimination against a protected
5 group. Lowery, 158 F.3d at 759; see Bacon v. Honda of Am. Mfg., 6 Inc., 370 F.3d 565, 575 (6th Cir. 2004); Celestine, 266 F.3d at 7 355 (5th Cir. 2001). The plaintiff bears the initial burden of 8 demonstrating a prima facie case by a preponderance of the 9 evidence that the defendant's standard operating procedure
10 included discriminatory practices. Teamsters, 431 U.S. at 336.
11 "At this initial 'liability' stage, the [plaintiff] is not 12 required to prove that any particular employee was a victim of 13 the pattern or practice; it need only establish a prima facie
14 case that such a policy existed." Lowery, 158 F.3d at 760
15 (citing Teamsters, 431 U.S. at 360). Once such a prima facie 16 case is established, the burden shifts to the defendant to 17 demonstrate that the plaintiff's showing is either inaccurate or 18 insignificant. Id. If the defendant fails to rebut the 19 plaintiff's case "the resulting finding of a discriminatory 20 pattern or practice gives rise to an inference that all employees 21 subject to the policy were its victims and are entitled to 22 appropriate remedies." Id. at 759 (citing Teamsters, 431 U.S. at 23 362). Such a finding justifies an award of prospective relief, 24 but if individual relief is sought, the plaintiff must 25 demonstrate that the individual employees were actual victims of 26 the policy. Id.

27 Although plaintiffs no longer assert class claims or seek 28 prospective injunctive relief, they assert that they may still

1 press a pattern or practice theory of relief. "The Supreme Court
2 has never applied the Teamsters method of proof in a private, 3 non-class suit." Id. at 761. "Rather, the Court has noted that 4 there is a 'manifest' and 'crucial' difference between an 5 individual's claim of discrimination and a class action alleging 6 a general pattern or practice of discrimination." Id. (quoting
7 Cooper v. Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, 467 U.S. 867, 876
8 (1984). Where the government or plaintiff class must first 9 litigate the common question of whether there was a 10 discriminatory policy, individual plaintiffs must litigate "the 11 discrete question of whether the employer discriminated against 12 that plaintiff in a specific instance." Id. (citing McDonnell 13 Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 802 (1973)).

14 Pattern or practice class-action suits also differ from 15 individual, private discrimination suits because of the "nature 16 of remedies." Id. Pattern or practice class-action suits 17 typically seek to cure systemic discrimination and the harm
18 suffered by the group subjected to that discrimination. Id.
19 Therefore, plaintiffs typically seek injunctions for broad 20 relief, and the "need for such remedies can be determined without 21 referring to matters such as the qualifications of a particular 22 employee." Id. Conversely, in an individual discrimination 23 case, the plaintiff generally seeks damages specific to the 24 individualized harm inflicted upon him, such as reinstatement, 25 hiring, back-pay, or damages. Id. "Such remedies typically 26 require the examination of the circumstances surrounding a single 27 employment action involving the plaintiff." Id.

28 /////

1 Because a pattern or practice theory of recovery is focused 2 on establishing a policy of discrimination and not on individual 3 decisions affecting specific plaintiffs, "it is inappropriate as 4 a vehicle for proving discrimination in an individual case."
5 Bacon, 370 F.3d at 575; see Celestine, 266 F.3d at 356 (holding 6 that the pattern and practice method of proof was inapplicable to 7 an individual claim of discrimination "given the nature and 8 purpose of the pattern and practice method of proof").
9 Therefore, the court holds that the pattern or practice method of 10 proof set forth in Teamsters and excluded from the Court's 11 analysis in Morgan is not available to individual plaintiffs. As 12 such, plaintiffs' claims based upon unequal treatment that stem 13 from discrete acts by defendant UCD are not exempt from the 14 timely filing analysis set forth in Morgan and Ledbetter.

15 3. Applicable Statute of Limitations

16 Defendant UCD moves for judgement on the pleadings as to 17 plaintiffs' Title IX unequal treatment claims on the basis that 18 they are barred by the statute of limitations. Title IX, 20 19 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq., does not specify a limitations period.
20 When Congress fails to specify a statute of limitations for a 21 federal claim for relief, courts must apply the most closely 22 analogous statute of limitations under state law. Reed v. United 23 Transp. Union, 488 U.S. 319, 323 (1989). The Ninth Circuit has 24 not considered the issue under Title IX; however, the other 25 federal appellate courts that have considered the issue are in 26 accord that a Title IX claim is most closely analogous to a 27 common law action for personal injury. Doe v. Howe Military 28 School, 227 F.3d 981, 987 (7th Cir. 2000); M.H.D. v. Westminster

1 Schools, 172 F.3d 797, 803 (11th Cir. 1999); Lillard v. Shelby
2 County Bd. of Educ., 76 F.3d 716, 729 (6th Cir. 1996); Egerdahl
3 v. Hibbing Community College, 72 F.3d 615, 618 (8th Cir. 1995); 4 Bougher v. University of Pittsburgh, 882 F.2d 74, 77-78 (3d Cir.
5 1989). Moreover, in Taylor v. Regents of the University of 6 California, 993 F.2d 710, 712 (9th Cir. 1993), the Ninth Circuit 7 came to the same conclusion with respect to a Title VI claim. In 8 light of this authority, and the fact that Title IX is to be 9 construed consistently with Title VI,<sup>6</sup> the court applies 10 California's statute of limitations for personal injury actions 11 to plaintiffs' Title IX claims.<sup>7</sup>

12 In California, an aggrieved party must commence an action 13 for personal injury caused by an alleged wrongful act or neglect 14 within two years of the act. Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1. The 15 two-year limitations period is a fairly recent development.
16 Before 2003, the limitations period for personal injury claims 17 was one year. Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3), repealed. Section 18 335.1 became effective January 1, 2003. This amendment impacts 19 this case, which was filed December 18, 2003.

---

21 <sup>6</sup> Since Title IX has identical statutory language to 22 Title VI, except for the substitution of the word "sex" in Title 23 IX to replace the words "race, color, or national origin" in 24 Title VI, the Supreme Court has interpreted both statutes interchangeably. Cannon v. University of Chicago, 441 U.S. 677, 694-99 (1979).

25 <sup>7</sup> Plaintiffs' argument to the contrary, based on one 26 Northern District of California decision, is unavailing. Kramer
27 v. Regents of the University of California, 81 F. Supp. 2d 972 28 (N.D. Cal. 1999) (applying California's three-year statute of limitations for actions "upon a liability created by statute" to ADA and Rehabilitation Act claims). In the Title IX context, it is contrary to the weight of the authority described above, most particularly Taylor.

1 A legislative extension of the statute of limitations period 2 will extend the limitations period of an actionable claim if the 3 extension occurs before the claim for relief becomes time barred 4 under the old limitations period. Douglas Aircraft Co. v.
5 Cranston, 58 Cal. 2d 462, 465 (1962). On the other hand, once a 6 claim is time barred it will not be revived by the extension to 7 the applicable limitations period unless the legislature 8 expressly declared that the amendment of the limitations period 9 applied retroactively. Bartman v. Estate of Bartman, 83 Cal.
10 App. 3d 780, 787-78 (1978). Such an expression of retroactivity 11 was made here only for victims of the terrorist attacks of 12 September 11. Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 340.10(b).

13 Plaintiffs' first claim for relief alleges that defendant 14 UCD violated Title IX by failing to provide equal athletic 15 opportunities. Specifically, plaintiffs allege that defendant 16 (1) chooses "to make fewer athletic participation opportunities 17 to female students than to male students;" and (2) intentionally 18 discriminates against female students by only providing male 19 students with the opportunity to wrestle and by issuing the No 20 Females Directive. (Compl. ¶¶ 129-30). Viewing the complaint in 21 the light most favorable to plaintiffs, their first claim for 22 relief alleges both (1) an ineffective accommodation theory; and 23 (2) an unequal treatment theory under Title IX. As set forth 24 above, plaintiffs' unequal treatment claims stem from discrete 25 discriminatory acts by defendant. The last discrete 26 discriminatory act alleged by plaintiffs occurred, at the latest,

27 /////

28 /////

1 in October 2001, when their OCR complaint was resolved.<sup>8</sup> The 2 statute of limitations then in effect was one year, and thus,
3 plaintiffs' claims were required to be filed no later than the 4 Fall of 2002. Therefore, plaintiffs' first claim for relief for 5 unequal treatment is barred by the statute of limitations, and 6 defendant UCD's motion with respect to this claim is GRANTED.<sup>9</sup>

7 Plaintiffs' second claim for relief alleges that defendant
8 UCD violated Title IX by failing to provide equal athletic 9 financial assistance by offering athletic scholarship funding to 10 male students and by intentionally discriminating against female 11 students by choosing to make less athletic financial assistance 12 available. In order to allege a claim under Title IX with 13 respect to scholarships, the plaintiff must be a member of a 14 varsity team. See Pederson, 213 F.3d at 872 (finding that 15 "[s]tanding to challenge effective accommodation does not 16 automatically translate into standing to challenge the treatment 17 of existing varsity athletes" with respect to claims for unequal 18 treatment in scholarship opportunities). At the latest, 19 plaintiffs were members of the varsity team in the Fall of 2001.
20 The statute of limitations then in effect was one year, and thus, 21 plaintiffs' claims were required to be filed no later than the 22 Fall of 2002. Therefore, plaintiffs' second claim for relief for 23

24 <sup>8</sup> Here, the existence of plaintiffs' OCR complaints may 25 be judicially noticed by this court. See e.g., Pavone v.
26 Citicorp Credit Services, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1040, 1045 (S.D. Cal.
27 1997). The truth of the allegations contained therein, however, is not subject to judicial notice. See Southern Cross Overseas Agencies, Inc. v. Wah Kwong Shipping Group Ltd., 181 F.3d 410, 427 (3d Cir. 1999).

28 <sup>9</sup> The court addresses the viability of plaintiffs' ineffective accommodation claims, infra.

1 unequal treatment is barred by the statute of limitations, and 2 defendant UCD's motion with respect to this claim is GRANTED.

3 Plaintiffs' third claim for relief alleges that defendant
4 UCD retaliated against plaintiffs. Specifically, plaintiffs 5 allege four "retaliatory" acts, the last of which occurred in the 6 Fall of 2001: (1) defendant instituted the No Females Directive 7 in the Fall of 2000; (2) defendant reneged on the promise to 8 remedy the No Females Directive in the Fall of 2001; (3) 9 defendant did not renew Michael Burch's contract in mid-2001; and 10 (4) defendant allowed the female wrestlers a chance to wrestle 11 against the male wrestlers for a position on the men's wrestling 12 team in the Fall of 2001.<sup>10</sup> Again, the statute of limitations 13 then in effect was one year, and thus, plaintiffs' claims were 14 required to be filed no later than the Fall of 2002. Therefore, 15 plaintiffs' third claim for relief for retaliation is barred by 16 the statute of limitations, and defendant UCD's motion with 17 respect to this claim is GRANTED.<sup>11</sup>

18
19 <sup>10</sup> Again, plaintiffs allege that this retaliation resulted 20 in a policy of discrimination. (Compl. ¶ 150). As set forth 21 above, however, the heart of plaintiffs' complaint relates to 22 these discrete acts against the individual plaintiffs. (Compl.
23 ¶¶ 151-57). Plaintiffs have cited no authority for the 24 proposition that an ineffective accommodation claim can be raised 25 through a retaliation claim.

26 <sup>11</sup> Plaintiffs argue that this court should follow the 27 rationale in its prior Memorandum and Order, filed May 6, 2004, 28 which found that plaintiffs' claims, as alleged, were timely and which directed the parties to further brief the statute of limitations issues on a motion for summary judgment. Since that order, there have been substantial changes in this litigation, namely the dismissal of class allegations. Moreover, the parties' arguments and submissions have further clarified the legal theories advanced by plaintiffs. The court's prior order reflected its analysis of plaintiffs' ineffective accommodation claim, as set forth infra. The court did not specifically

B. Ineffective Accommodation

In their first claim for relief, plaintiffs allege that defendant UCD violated Title IX by "choosing to make fewer athletic participation opportunities to female students than to male students." (Compl. ¶ 129). The court construes that by this allegation, plaintiffs are alleging an ineffective accommodation claim. Defendant argues that plaintiffs' ineffective accommodation claim should be dismissed because plaintiffs (1) alleged insufficient facts to support standing for an ineffective accommodation claim; (2) failed to give s notice of their claims; and (3) cannot assert a claim for damages based specifically upon the lack of opportunity to wrestle.<sup>12</sup>

1. Standing

Defendant UCD contends that plaintiffs have not alleged sufficient facts to set forth an ineffective accommodation claim. Specifically, defendant contends that (1) plaintiffs failed to allege that there was sufficient interest and ability among females at UCD to field a women's wrestling team; (2) plaintiffs have failed to allege that there was a reasonable expectation of intercollegiate competition in women's wrestling; and (3) plaintiffs were allowed to try out for the wrestling team on an equal basis with male students.

<sup>11</sup>(...continued)
address plaintiffs' unequal treatment claims. However, to the extent that this order is inconsistent with the court's Memorandum and Order, filed May 6, 2004, the court reconsiders that Order. Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 54(b).

<sup>12</sup> Defendant does not argue that plaintiffs' ineffective accommodation claims are barred by the statute of limitations.

1       The allegations in the complaint adequately demonstrate that 2 there was sufficient interest and ability among females at UCD to 3 field a team. The complaint contains allegations that in the 4 early 1990s UCD began providing wrestling opportunities to female 5 students, including a women's division in the university's annual 6 "Aggie Open" wrestling tournament. Some of UCD's female 7 wrestlers went on to national and international acclaim after 8 having trained at and received the benefits of wrestling at UCD.
9 Plaintiffs chose to attend UCD because of that history and 10 because of the promise of opportunities to participate in 11 wrestling at UCD. Mansourian, Chiang, and Ng filled out the NCAA 12 and UCD paperwork necessary for intercollegiate athletics, 13 completed the weight certification requirements for 14 intercollegiate wrestling, and participated in UCD's wrestling 15 program for about 2 years. Mancuso similarly fulfilled the NCAA 16 and UCD requirements and attended UCD in order to wrestle.
17 Plaintiffs also allege that there are nearly 1,000 female 18 students who participate in wrestling at California high schools, 19 and there are other female students who participate in wrestling 20 at California community colleges. As such, viewing the 21 allegations in the light most favorable to plaintiffs and drawing 22 all reasonable inferences therefrom, plaintiffs allege that they 23 were able and ready to wrestle at UCD and that sufficient 24 interest existed in the female student population at UCD to field 25 a women's wrestling team.

26       With respect to defendant's assertion that plaintiffs have 27 failed to allege with particularity that there is a reasonable 28 expectation of intercollegiate competition, defendant asks this

1 court to impose too heavy a burden on plaintiffs at this stage in 2 the litigation. On a motion challenging the sufficiency of the 3 pleadings, plaintiffs are not required to plead specific facts 4 establishing a prima facie case of ineffective accommodation.
5 Swierkiewicz, 534 U.S. at 510-11. Rather, all that is required 6 is a plain statement of the facts sufficient to give the 7 defendant notice of the claims against it. Id. at 514. In 8 Swierkiewicz, the Court of Appeals had affirmed the district 9 court's dismissal of a case brought by an employee against his 10 former employer under Title VII and the ADEA because the 11 plaintiff failed to allege the elements of a prima facie case of 12 discrimination in his complaint. Id. at 509-10. The Supreme 13 Court reversed the dismissal, holding that pursuant to Federal 14 Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a), a complaint requires only a "short 15 and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is 16 entitled to relief" in order to survive a motion to dismiss. Id.
17 at 510-11. The Court rejected applying a heightened pleading 18 standard to discrimination claims. Id. at 511. Even if 19 plaintiffs have not specifically alleged a reasonable expectation 20 of intercollegiate competition, plaintiffs have complied with 21 Rule 8(a) and given sufficient notice to defendant of the basis 22 for their claims. Therefore, defendant's motion to dismiss on 23 this basis is without merit.

24 Finally, defendant contends that plaintiffs do not have 25 standing to bring an ineffective accommodation claim because they 26 allege that they were able to compete with men on an equal basis 27 for a position on the wrestling team. However, the crux of 28 plaintiffs' claim is that this accommodation was not effective

1 because they were forced to compete in a contact sport against 2 men using men's rules. At this stage in the litigation, viewing 3 the allegations in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs,
4 the court cannot find as a matter of law that defendant's 5 proffered opportunity constituted an effective accommodation.

6 Therefore, defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings
7 with respect to plaintiffs' ineffective accommodation claim on 8 the grounds that plaintiffs lack standing to sue is DENIED.

9 2. Notice

10 Defendant UCD asserts that plaintiffs' ineffective 11 accommodation claim must fail because plaintiffs "have not 12 alleged that they gave defendant notice or opportunity to remedy 13 any purported systemic non-compliance with Title IX." (Defs.'
14 Reply to Pls.' Supp. Brief. at 5, filed August 17, 2007.) 15 Defendant cites Grandson v. Univ. of Minn., 272 F.3d 568 (8th 16 Cir. 2001), in support of their assertion. Id. In Grandson, the 17 Eighth Circuit affirmed dismissal of similar damage claims 18 without leave to amend because the complaint made "no allegation 19 of prior notice of their complaints to appropriate UMD officials, 20 no allegation of deliberate indifference by such officials, and 21 no allegation they had afforded UMD a reasonable opportunity to 22 rectify the alleged violations." Grandson, 272 F.3d at 575.

23 Plaintiffs allege that they filed a complaint with the OCR
24 in the Spring of 2001. (Id. at ¶ 67.) Contrary to defendant's 25 assertions, under the Rule 12(b)(6) standard, this allegation 26 reasonably supports the inference that plaintiffs did provide 27 notice to defendant of their ineffective accommodation claim.

28 /////

1 Defendant requests that the court take judicial notice of 2 letters and reports from the OCR relating to plaintiffs' 3 complaints. Rule 201 permits a court to take judicial notice of 4 an adjudicative fact "not subject to reasonable dispute," in that 5 the fact is either "(1) generally known within the territorial 6 jurisdiction of the trial court or (2) capable of accurate and 7 ready determination by resort to sources whose accuracy cannot 8 reasonably be questioned." Fed. R. Evid. 201(b). The court can 9 take judicial notice of matters of public record, such as 10 pleadings in another action and records and reports of 11 administrative bodies. Emrich v. Touche Ross & Co., 846 F.2d 12 1190, 1198 (9th Cir. 1988). Here, the existence of plaintiffs' 13 OCR complaints may be judicially noticed by this court. See 14 e.g., Pavone v. Citicorp Credit Services, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1040, 15 1045 (S.D. Cal. 1997). The truth of the allegations contained 16 therein, however, is not subject to judicial notice. See 17 Southern Cross Overseas Agencies, Inc. v. Wah Kwong Shipping 18 Group Ltd., 181 F.3d 410, 427 (3d Cir. 1999). Because the court 19 cannot take judicial notice of the content of the OCR documents, 20 the court cannot determine whether plaintiffs provided defendant 21 with notice of their OCR complaint. Moreover, none of the 22 proffered documents includes plaintiffs' complaint to the OCR;
23 rather, the only relevant documents contain the OCR's 24 characterizations and descriptions of plaintiffs' complaint. The 25 accuracy of the OCR's conclusions is a factual dispute that must 26 be resolved on summary judgment or at trial.

27 /////

28 /////

1 Therefore, defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings
2 on the basis that plaintiffs provided insufficient notice of 3 their ineffective accommodation claim is DENIED.<sup>13</sup>

4 3. Damages

5 Finally, defendant argues that plaintiffs' ineffective 6 accommodation claim must fail because the damages they seek are 7 too speculative. (Defs.' Reply at 5-7, filed August 17, 2001.)
8 Specifically, defendant argues that plaintiffs cannot assume that 9 they would have been able to wrestle at UCD if it had been in 10 compliance with Title IX.

11 This case is analogous to the Fifth Circuit's decision in 12 Pederson, 213 F.3d 858, where the court found that plaintiffs, 13 female soccer players, had standing to sue for damages under an 14 ineffective accommodation theory. In Pederson, the plaintiffs 15 alleged that Louisiana State University discriminated against 16 females by ineffectively accommodating female students in the 17 provision of teams and facilities for intercollegiate 18 competition. 213 F.3d at 863. The court held that under an 19 ineffective accommodation theory, the injuries to a plaintiff 20 "resulted from the imposed barrier - the absence of a varsity 21 team for a position on which a female student should be allowed 22 to try out." Id. at 871. Therefore, so long as a plaintiff 23 alleged that she was willing and able to compete for a position 24 on that team, the injury and resulting damages were not unduly

---

26 <sup>13</sup> For the purposes of this motion and because plaintiffs 27 have made sufficient allegations with respect to defendant's 28 argument, the court assumes, without deciding, that Title IX requires that a plaintiff give a defendant notice and an opportunity to respond.

1 speculative such that plaintiffs' claims should be dismissed on 2 the pleading. Moreover, the court held that to the extent "LSU 3 violated the individual rights of the plaintiffs by failing to 4 accommodate effectively the interests and abilities of female 5 students" and to the extent such violations caused actual 6 damages, the plaintiffs were entitled to be compensated for those 7 damages. Id. at 875.

8 In this case, viewing the allegations in the light most 9 favorable to plaintiffs and drawing all reasonable inferences
10 therefrom, plaintiffs allege that they suffered actual damages 11 because of the absence of a varsity team, specifically a 12 wrestling team, for a position on which a female student should 13 be allowed to compete. Therefore, based upon the rationale of 14 the Fifth Circuit in Pederson, plaintiffs' claim for damages are 15 not unduly speculative.

16 Defendant relies primarily on National Wrestling Coaches 17 Association v. Department of Education, 366 F.3d 930 (D.C. Cir.
18 2004), in support of its assertion that plaintiffs' claim must 19 fail because damages are too speculative. However, the facts in 20 National Wrestling Coaches are distinguishable from the facts in 21 this case. In National Wrestling Coaches, the plaintiffs 22 represented athletics organizations that supported college 23 wrestling. Id. at 933. These organizations asked the court to 24 declare Title IX's three-part test invalid because it allegedly 25 encouraged universities to cut male wrestling programs. Id. at 26 936-37. The court reasoned that "[e]ven if the court invalidated 27 the department's three-part test, schools might nevertheless 28 continue to eliminate or cap men's wrestling teams in order to

1 comply with Title IX or the 1975 regulations or for some other 2 unrelated reason. Save for their speculation about 'better 3 odds,' appellants would be no better off than they are under the 4 department's current policies." Id. at 944. Therefore, the 5 court found that plaintiffs lacked standing because they failed 6 to show that their alleged injury could be redressed by 7 invalidating the challenged policy. Id.

8       Conversely, in this case, plaintiffs seek monetary and 9 punitive damages for injury resulting from lost opportunities 10 while they were students at UCD. Plaintiffs allege actual 11 injury, including lost educational opportunities, increased 12 education expenses, and emotional distress, all arising from 13 defendant's alleged violations of Title IX. As such, plaintiffs 14 have sufficiently demonstrated that the monetary relief sought in 15 this case would sufficiently redress their alleged injury.
16 Therefore, defendant's reliance on National Wrestling Coaches is 17 misplaced.

18       Thus, defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings 19 regarding plaintiffs' ineffective accommodation claim based upon 20 an unduly speculative claim for damages is DENIED.

21       C. Punitive Damages

22       Defendant UCD argues that plaintiffs' claims for punitive 23 damages under Title IX must be dismissed because they are not 24 permitted under federal law. In discussing the available 25 remedies under Title IX and by comparison, Title VI, the Supreme 26 Court has found that "[a] funding recipient is generally on 27 notice that it is subject not only to those remedies explicitly 28 provided in the relevant legislation, but also to those remedies

1 traditionally available in suits for breach of contract." Barnes
2 v. Gorman, 536 U.S. 181, 187 (2002) (citing Franklin v. Gwinnett 3 County Pub. Sch., 503 U.S. 60, 76 (1992)). The Court has also 4 noted that "punitive damages, unlike compensatory damages and 5 injunction, are generally not available for breach of contract."
6 Id. (citations omitted). Therefore, the Court has held that 7 "Title VI funding recipients have not, merely by accepting funds, 8 implicitly consented to liability for punitive damages." Id. at 9 188. It is well established that Title IX is modeled after Title 10 VI and is interpreted and applied in the same manner. See id. at 11 185; see also Gebser v. Lago Vista Indep. Sch. Dist., 524 U.S.
12 274, 286 (1998). As such, because the Supreme Court has found 13 that punitive damages may not be awarded in private suits under 14 Title VI, it follows that they may not be awarded in private 15 suits under Title IX. See id. at 185-90; see also Mercer v. Duke 16 Univ., 401 F.3d 199, 202 (4th Cir. 2005) (stating that punitive 17 damages are not available under Title IX); Frechel-Rodriguez v.
18 Puerto Rico Dept. of Educ., 478 F. Supp. 2d 191, 198-99 (D.P.R.
19 2007) (same); Hooper v. North Carolina, 379 F. Supp. 2d 804, 811
20 (M.D.N.C. 2005) (same); Alston v. North Carolina A & T Univ., 304
21 F. Supp. 2d 774, 784 (M.D.N.C. 2004) (same). Moreover, this 22 conclusion is supported by the Supreme Court's "traditional 23 presumption against imposition of punitive damages on government 24 entities." Vermont Agency of Natural Res. v. United States ex 25 rel. Stevens, 529 U.S. 765, 784-85 (2000); Newport v. Fact 26 Concerts, Inc., 453 U.S. 247, 262-63 (1981).

27 Plaintiffs contend that punitive damages are not unavailable
28 for Title IX claims as a matter of law. However, plaintiffs

1 wholly fail to address the Supreme Court's analysis in Barnes.
2 The only cases cited by plaintiffs in support of their position 3 are cases that pre-date the Court's decision in Barnes by at 4 least five years. Such sparse analysis is unpersuasive in light 5 of the Supreme Court's ruling in Barnes and the decisions of 6 subsequent courts that have addressed this issue.<sup>14</sup>

7 Therefore, defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings
8 regarding plaintiffs' claims for punitive damages under Title IX 9 is GRANTED.

10 D. Emotional Distress Damages

11 Defendant UCD also argues that plaintiffs' claims for 12 emotional distress damages under Title IX must be dismissed 13 because they are not permitted under federal law. Specifically, 14 defendant contends that relief under Title IX is limited to the 15 forms of relief traditionally available in suits for breach of 16 contract and that, absent extreme circumstances, emotional 17 distress damages are not normally recoverable in contract claims.
18 However, defendant fails to cite any case law to support its 19 position that emotional distress damages are not recoverable in 20 an ineffective accommodation claim under Title IX. Rather, 21 defendant acknowledges that the Supreme Court has implicitly 22 approved of damages claims for emotional distress in sexual 23 harassment claims brought pursuant to Title IX. Davis v. Monroe

---

24
25 <sup>14</sup> Plaintiffs also contend that it is improper for this 26 court to consider the viability of remedies on a motion for 27 judgment on the pleadings. This contention is without merit.
28 The treatise cited by plaintiffs in support of their argument does not support their assertion. Further, partial judgment on the pleadings serves to expedite the litigation and narrow the claims for discovery and trial.

County Bd. of Educ., 526 U.S. 629 (1999); Gebser, 524 U.S. 274; Franklin, 503 U.S. 60. Defendant simply argues that those cases are inapplicable because the alleged breach of a duty to provide equal accommodation in athletic programs is not sufficiently severe to justify the award of emotional damages.

At this stage in the litigation, in the absence of any authority on point, the court cannot find as a matter of law that plaintiffs are not entitled to emotional distress damages. Therefore, defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings regarding plaintiffs' claims for emotional distress damages is DENIED.

II. 42 U.S.C. § 1983

Plaintiffs bring claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against the individual defendants for monetary damages based upon alleged violations of the Equal Protection Clause.<sup>15</sup> Defendants argue that plaintiffs' § 1983 claim must be dismissed because it is subsumed by Title IX. Alternatively, plaintiffs claim that their section 1983 claim can coexist with their Title IX claims.

There is presently a split in circuit authority as to whether Title IX subsumes a claim under § 1983. Compare Bruneau v. South Kortright Cent. Sch. Dist., 163 F.3d 749, 758 (2d Cir. 1998) ("[A] § 1983 claim based on the Equal Protection Clause is subsumed by Title IX), and Waid v. Merrill Area Pub. Sch., 91 F.3d 857, 862 (7th Cir. 1996) (holding that a plaintiff may not

<sup>15</sup> Plaintiffs brought this claim against defendant UCD for injunctive relief only and against the individual defendants for all available remedies. Because plaintiffs conceded that they are no longer seeking injunctive relief, plaintiffs' § 1983 claims against defendant UCD are DISMISSED.

1 claim that a single set of facts leads to causes of action under 2 both Title IX and section 1983), and Pfeiffer v. Marion Ctr. Area
3 Sch. Dist., 917 F.2d 779, 789 (3d Cir. 1990) (same), and Travis
4 v. Folsom Cordova Unified Sch. Dist., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11566
5 (E.D. Cal. 2007) (holding that "Title VI is sufficiently 6 comprehensive to evince congressional intent to foreclose a § 7 1983 remedy"), with Crawford v. Davis, 109 F.3d 1281, 1284 (8th
8 Cir. 1987) (holding that Title IX has no preemptive power over 9 section 1983 claims), and Seamons v. Snow, 84 F.3d 1226, 1233 10 (10th Cir. 1996) (holding that plaintiff has independent rights 11 under Title IX and under § 1983), and Lillard v. Shelby County 12 Bd. of Educ., 76 F.3d 716, 722-23 (6th Cir. 1996) (holding that a 13 § 1983 claim seeks to enforce distinct and independent 14 substantive due process rights).

15 Section 1983 does not create substantive rights, but 16 provides the procedural framework for a plaintiff to bring suit 17 for violations of federal rights. "Section 1983 supplies a cause 18 of action to a plaintiff when a person acting under the color of 19 state law deprives that plaintiff of any 'rights, privileges, or 20 immunities secured by the Constitution and laws of the United 21 States.'" Bruneau, 163 F.3d at 756 (citing 42 U.S.C. § 1983).
22 However, § 1983 does not provide a remedy for violations of all 23 federal statutes. "When the remedial devices provided in a 24 particular Act are sufficiently comprehensive, they may suffice 25 to demonstrate congressional intent to preclude the remedy of 26 suits under § 1983." Middlesex County Sewerage Auth. v. Nat'l 27 Sea Clammers Ass'n, 453 U.S. 1, 20 (1981). While the Ninth 28 Circuit has not decided the specific issue of whether § 1983

1 claims are subsumed by Title IX, it has recognized that federal 2 statutes may preclude a § 1983 remedy if they are sufficiently 3 comprehensive. See, e.g., Dittman v. California, 191 F.3d 1020, 4 1028 (9th Cir. 1999); Dep't of Educ. v. Katherine D., 727 F.2d
5 809, 820 (9th Cir. 1983). The court agrees with the reasoning
6 of the Second Circuit in Bruneau that, under the Sea Clammers 7 doctrine, Title IX's enforcement scheme is sufficiently 8 comprehensive to subsume plaintiffs' section 1983 claims and 9 demonstrate that Congress intended to preclude § 1983 claims when 10 it enacted this statute. See Bruneau, 163 F.3d at 756-57.

11 Title IX's administrative enforcement scheme is complex and 12 designed to ensure compliance with its mandates. Id. at 756.
13 Under the enforcement scheme, injured persons can file a 14 complaint with the Department of Education ("DOE"), see 34 C.F.R.
15 § 100.7(b) (1997), and the DOE must then investigate the 16 allegations. Id. § 100.7(c); Bruneau, 163 F.3d at 756. The DOE 17 may also periodically conduct its own compliance reviews without 18 a complaint. Id. § 100.7(a); Bruneau, 163 F.3d at 756. If the 19 DOE concludes that a complaint has merit or discovers violations 20 stemming from its own reviews, the DOE will notify the 21 institution and attempt to reconcile the situation through 22 informal means. Id. § 100.7(d); Bruneau, 163 F.3d at 756. If 23 the DOE is unsuccessful, it may ultimately terminate federal 24 funding to the institution after an administrative hearing. Id.
25 § 100.8; Bruneau, 163 F.3d at 756. As such, Title IX provides a 26 comprehensive administrative remedial scheme.

27 Further, in addition to the robust administrative remedial 28 scheme, the Supreme Court has held that Title IX provides

1 individuals with a private cause of action. See Cannon v. Univ.
2 of Chicago, 441 U.S. 677, 709 (1979). "Once in court, the Title
3 IX plaintiff has access to a full panoply of remedies including 4 equitable relief and compensatory damages." Bruneau, 163 F.3d at 5 756 (citing Franklin, 503 U.S. 60, 73-76 (1992)). The fact that 6 Title IX provides a private remedy in the courts provides further 7 support for Congress' intent to subsume a section 1983 remedy
8 with Title IX.

9 Therefore, given Title IX's administrative and judicial 10 remedies, the court adopts the rationale of the Second Circuit 11 and finds that it was Congress' intent "that a claimed violation 12 of Title IX be pursued under Title IX and not § 1983." Bruneau, 13 163 F.3d at 757; see Pfeiffer, 917 F.2d at 789; Travis, 2007 U.S.
14 Dist. LEXIS 11566 at *15-16 (holding that Title VI precludes 15 claims brought pursuant to § 1983 arising from the same facts).

16 Plaintiffs contend that Title IX does not provide a remedy 17 for constitutional rights and thus, it cannot subsume a claim for 18 violation of their rights to equal protections. In support of 19 their assertion, plaintiffs cite the decisions from the Sixth, 20 Eighth, and Tenth Circuits, which have carved out an exception to 21 the Sea Clammers doctrine for constitutional rights. See 22 Crawford, 109 F.3d at 1284; Seamons, 84 F.3d at 1233; Lillard, 76
23 F.3d at 722-23. Generally, these Circuits reasoned that although 24 the claims may arise from the same factual basis, the Equal 25 Protection clause gives rise to distinct and independent 26 substantive due process rights separate and apart from those 27 rights protected by Title IX.

28 /////

1 Plaintiffs' argument is unpersuasive. In Sea Clammers, the 2 Supreme Court focused on the available remedies in deciding 3 whether a claim under § 1983 was precluded by a federal statutory 4 scheme. 453 U.S. at 13, 20. The constitutional right exception 5 focuses on the nature of the underlying right, an inquiry not 6 focused upon by the Court in Sea Clammers. Rather, in Smith v.
7 Robinson, the Supreme Court found that the Education of The 8 Handicapped Act ("EHA") provided a sufficiently comprehensive 9 enforcement scheme, such that it demonstrated Congress' intent to 10 preclude a claim under § 1983 for an alleged Equal Protection 11 Clause violation. 468 U.S. 992, 1013<sup>16</sup> ("We conclude, therefore, 12 that where the EHA is available to a handicapped child asserting 13 a right to a free appropriate public education, based either on 14 the EHA or on the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth 15 Amendment, the EHA is the exclusive avenue through which the 16 child and his parents or guardian can pursue their claim.")
17 (emphasis added). Therefore, the court finds that there is not 18 an exception to the Sea Clammers doctrine based upon plaintiffs' 19 assertion of a constitutional right.

20 Plaintiffs also argue that their § 1983 claim cannot be 21 subsumed by their Title IX claim because their § 1983 claim is 22 pressed against different defendants, the individual defendants, 23 not UCD. Plaintiffs misconstrue the doctrine of preemption. See 24 Boulahanis v. Bd. of Regents, 198 F.3d 633, 640 (7th Cir. 1999).

25
26 <sup>16</sup> Congress subsequently amended the EHA to explicitly 27 provide that the EHA is not the exclusive remedy. 20 U.S.C. § 28 1415(f). However, this subsequent amendment to statute does not modify the analysis of the Supreme Court and its clear indication that there is not a constitutional exception to the Sea Clammers doctrine.

1 Through the enactment of Title IX and its remedial scheme, 2 Congress created a regime "for the redress of sex discrimination 3 in athletic opportunities at federally-funded institutions." Id.
4 That regime need not include the ability to press claims against 5 both the institution and the individuals involved. Id. Rather, 6 "[t]he fact that individual claims are not available under Title 7 IX means that Congress has chosen suits against institutions as 8 the means of redressing such wrongs." Id. (citing Sea Clammers, 9 435 U.S. at 20); see also Waid v. Merrill Area Pub. Sch., 91 F.3d 10 857, 862 (7th Cir. 1996) ("Congress intended to place the burden 11 of compliance with civil rights law on educational institutions 12 themselves, not on the individual officials associated with those 13 institutions."); Travis, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11566 at *16 14 ("Allowing Plaintiffs to plead around the detailed statutory 15 scheme created by Title VI by pleading a § 1983 claim against 16 [the defendant] in his individual capacity would be inconsistent 17 with Congress' creation of restrictions on Title VI claims.").
18 As such, plaintiffs' argument that their § 1983 claim is not 19 subsumed by Title IX because it is asserted against the 20 individual defendants, not UCD, is without merit.

21 Therefore, because plaintiffs' § 1983 claim is subsumed by 22 Title IX, defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings 23 regarding plaintiffs § 1983 claim is GRANTED.

24 III. State Law Claims

25 Finally, defendants argue that plaintiffs' state law claims 26 against them should be dismissed because they are immune from 27 suit. Plaintiffs conceded at oral argument that Eleventh 28 Amendment immunity applies to bar their state law claims against

1 UCD. The individual defendants contend that they are immune from 2 suit based upon the discretionary immunity accorded public
3 employees pursuant to California Government Code § 820.2.<sup>17</sup>

4 Section 820.2 provides immunity to a public employee for 5 injuries resulting from "his act or omission where the act or 6 omission was the result of the exercise of the discretion vested 7 in him, whether or not such discretion be abused." Cal. Gov't 8 Code § 820.2 (West 2007). Generally, "a discretionary act is one 9 which requires the exercise of judgment or choice." Kemmerer v.
10 County of Fresno, 200 Cal. App. 3d 1426, 1437 (1988). However, 11 California courts have not set forth a definitive rule which 12 resolves every case. Id. Rather, the California Supreme Court 13 has adopted an analysis that relies on the "policy considerations 14 relevant to the purpose of granting immunity to the governmental 15 agency whose employees act in discretionary capacities." Id.
16 (internal citations omitted).

17 Immunity is reserved for those basic policy decisions 18 which have been expressly committed to coordinate 19 branches of government, and as to which judicial 20 interference would thus be "unseemly." Such areas of 21 quasi-legislative policy-making are sufficiently sensitive to call for judicial abstention from interference that might even in the first instance affect the coordinate body's decision-making process.

22 Barner v. Leeds, 24 Cal. 4th 676, 685 (2000) (emphasis added).
23 "Immunity applies only to deliberate and considered policy 24 decisions in which a conscious balancing of risks and advantages

25
26 <sup>17</sup> Defendants assert numerous arguments in support of 27 their assertion that plaintiffs' state law claims against them 28 should be dismissed. However, as set forth infra, because the court finds that discretionary immunity applies to defendants' alleged conduct, the court does not address the merits of those arguments.

1 took place." Caldwell v. Montoya, 10 Cal. 4th 972, 981 (1995)
2 (internal quotation omitted). As such, the California Supreme 3 Court has drawn a distinction "between the 'planning' and 4 'operational' levels of decision-making." Johnson v. State, 69
5 Cal. 2d 782, 795 (1968).

6 The California Supreme Court has also noted that in order
7 for § 820.2 immunity to apply, a decision by the public employee 8 need not be "a strictly careful, thorough, formal, or correct
9 evaluation." Caldwell, 10 Cal. 4th at 983 ("[C]laims of improper 10 evaluation cannot divest a discretionary policy decision of its 11 immunity."). The Caldwell court reasoned that "[s]uch a standard 12 would swallow an immunity designed to protect against claims of 13 carelessness, malice, bad judgment, or abuse of discretion in the 14 formulation of policy." Id. at 983-84.

15 A fair reading of the complaint reveals allegations that the 16 individual defendants made actual, conscious, and considered 17 collective policy decision. See id. at 984. Plaintiffs allege 18 that "each of the individual defendants has authority over the 19 athletic programs at UC Davis and has participated in the 20 discriminatory actions and decisions" set forth in the complaint.
21 (Compl. ¶ 21). As such, plaintiffs have alleged that the conduct 22 was within the scope of the individual defendants' duties.
23 Plaintiffs also allege that they spoke or tried to speak to 24 various individual defendants regarding reinstatement of women's 25 wrestling, but defendants either refused to change their policies 26 or refused to meet with them. (Compl. ¶¶ 63-64). This 27 allegation reveals that the individual defendants were at least 28 aware and informed of plaintiffs' opposition to their decisions.

1 Further, plaintiffs allege that each of the individual defendants
2 was "instrumental in the decision to eliminate wrestling 3 participation and scholarship opportunities for female students."
4 (Compl. ¶ 22). As such, plaintiffs have alleged that defendants 5 made actual, conscious decisions relating to the alleged 6 discriminatory conduct.

7 Moreover, plaintiffs' allegations demonstrate that the 8 alleged discriminatory decisions made by the individual 9 defendants were policy decisions. Plaintiffs allege that the No 10 Females Directive issued by the individual defendants denied "the 11 then-current female wrestlers and all future female wrestlers the 12 many benefits obtained by these female alumni from participating 13 in wrestling at UC Davis." (Compl. ¶ 88). As such, the 14 allegations in the complaint allege that defendants' conduct 15 resulted in a wide-spread effect, not only to the plaintiffs, but 16 also to all future female wrestlers. Plaintiffs' allegations 17 also describe the public response to the individual defendants' 18 decisions. The media supported plaintiffs, writing articles in 19 newspapers and attending the 2001 Student Senate meeting.
20 (Compl. ¶ 70). A member of the California state assembly 21 expressed her concerns about the individual defendants' decision 22 to eliminate women's athletic participation opportunities and 23 threatened to withhold state funding if the decision was not 24 reversed. (Compl. ¶ 71). Thus, it is clear from the face of the 25 complaint that the elimination of a female wrestling program is a 26 "sensitive" issue with "fundamental policy implications."
27 Caldwell, 10 Cal. 4th at 983.

28 /////

1 Plaintiffs contend that the court cannot find that § 820.2
2 immunity applies to the individual defendants at the pleading 3 stage because the allegations in the complaint do not reveal the 4 process by which defendants made their decision and thus, do not 5 establish a considered decision. However, the Supreme Court of 6 California rejected this argument in Caldwell. 10 Cal. 4th at 7 983. In Caldwell, the court upheld defendants' demurrer based 8 upon § 820.2 immunity where board members allegedly voted to 9 replace the superintendent based upon improper motives of race 10 and age. Id. at 976. The court held that the complaint need not 11 disclose a "strictly careful, thorough, formal, or correct 12 evaluation." Id. at 983. Rather, the court found that the 13 application of § 820.2 immunity could be decided at the pleading 14 stage where "a fair reading of the complaint" demonstrate that 15 the defendant's conduct "involved an actual exercise of 16 discretion." Id. In this case, as set forth above, plaintiffs' 17 allegations demonstrate that the conduct by defendants 18 constituted "actual, conscious, and considered" collective policy
19 decisions. Id. at 984.

20 Finally, plaintiffs assert that defendants' actions were 21 operational decisions, not policy decisions. In support of this 22 assertion, plaintiffs argue that defendants' actions contravened 23 existing policies established under the California Education Code 24 and Title IX. However, the policies at issue in this case are 25 not those set forth by the legislature, but rather, the policies 26 of the University, as promulgated by the individual defendants.
27 Plaintiffs' complaint alleges that defendants' actions had a 28 wide-spread effect at UCD by eliminating athletic opportunities

1 for women. Such conduct is not the mere implementation of an 2 already established policy, but the creation of a new, allegedly 3 discriminatory policy. As such, plaintiffs' assertion that 4 alleged conduct of defendants were operational decisions is 5 without merit.

6 Therefore, because a fair reading of plaintiffs' complaint 7 reveals allegations that the individual defendants made actual, 8 conscious, and considered collective policy decisions, the 9 individual defendants are entitled to immunity pursuant to 820.2.
10 Thus, defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings regarding 11 plaintiffs' state law claims<sup>18</sup> is GRANTED.

12 CONCLUSION

13 For the foregoing reasons, defendants' motion for judgment 14 on the pleadings is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part.

15 (1) Defendant UCD's motion for judgment on the pleadings
16 regarding plaintiffs' first claim for relief under 17 Title IX based upon a theory unequal treatment is 18 GRANTED.

19 (2) Defendant UCD's motion for judgment on the pleadings
20 regarding plaintiffs' first claim for relief under 21 Title IX based upon a theory of ineffective 22 accommodation is DENIED.

23
24 <sup>18</sup> The Supreme Court has explicitly found that § 820.2
25 provides immunity against a public policy tort. Caldwell, 10 26 Cal. 4th at 984. Moreover, § 820.2 immunity will only fail to 27 apply to basic policy decision where there is a "clear indication 28 of legislative intent that statutory immunity is withheld or withdrawn" in a particular case. The court has found nothing in the Unruh Civil Rights Act which clearly evinces such an intent.
See id. at 987-88 (finding that FEHA did not carve out an exception to immunity through the phrase "[e]xcept as otherwise provided by statute").
